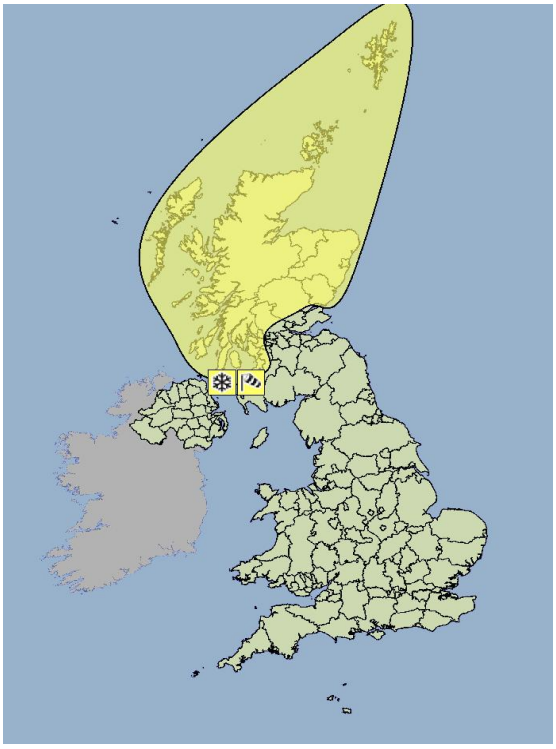
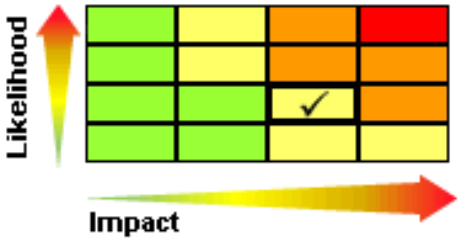
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
The stream of very cold air will continue to affect much of Britain, bringing a mixture of hazards. Amounts of snow will be very variable, and snow could turn back to sleet or rain for a time during the day in some areas.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind and Snow

Valid from 00:05 on Thu, 12th Jan 2017 until 23:55 on Thu, 12th Jan 2017

Strong winds, gusting up to around 60 mph in places, will continue to drive heavy, squally wintry showers across much of Scotland on Thursday. Many of the showers will fall as snow away from western coasts, with ice, hail and lightning posing additional hazards. 10-20 cm of snow may accumulate over some higher ground during the day, with drifting and blizzard conditions at times. Several cm of snow may affect some lower-lying areas.

Road and rail services may be affected with delays and cancellations possible. Expect longer journey times.
